

Research newsletters

Dissemination of the findings from our research and development programme aims to inform the development of policy and practice.

We publish short articles and news pieces in the newsletters of an increasing range of organisations and look for opportunities to do so. Please contact the Research Team to discuss further.

We also encourage the organisations that we commission to publish the findings of their work in peer reviewed and professional journals. Our research publications summarise findings for lay and professional audiences.

Vision 2020 UK Vision Research News

Vision 2020 UK is the umbrella organisation that facilitates greater collaboration and co-operation between organisations within the UK which focus on visual impairment, operating on a national, regional or international basis.

Vision Research News - is produced in partnership with Thomas Pocklington Trust, RNIB, Guide Dogs and the College of Optometrists. It brings together social research projects in the field of vision and provides summaries of the key findings from recent research, information about new projects and other relevant news for those interested in vision research.

The projects described here are of various sizes and may or may not have been peer reviewed. Our aim is to share this work with those who may find it of interest.

If your organisation has a completed project, a recently commissioned piece of work of interest to the community or just a piece of relevant news, you might want to share it through the medium of Vision Research News. If you would like to get involved, or have any comments or feedback, please contact martin.cordiner@college-optometrists.org.

If you would like to subscribe to Vision Research News, please email your request to l.beaumont@vision2020uk.org.uk.
